BRITISH RULERS LEAVE QUEBEC ON CANADIAN TOUR

Impressed by Warm Reception
In Ancient Walled
City

GO TO MONTREAL

Look Forward to New Round
of Royal Festivities
There

By Walter Kiernan

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

QUEBEC, May 18—Obviously impressed by the warm reception accorded them by the city of Quebec on their first day on Canadian soil, King George and Queen Elizabeth left today for a new round of royal festivities in Montreal.

A special train carrying Their Majesties on their tour of Canada, left at 9.30 a. m., eastern daylight time.

The King and Queen will arrive in Montreal at 3.15 p. m., eastern daylight time, after a brief stop at Three Rivers, where municipal officials will be presented to them.

QUEBEC, Que., May 18—(INS)—With one whirlwind day of formal appearances behind them, King George and Queen Elizabeth headed into a second today with Montreal awaiting their arrival and another packed program arranged for fewer hours.

Steeple bells in Quebec were ringing 11 (daylight time) last night before the first day of the royal progress ended—a day which probably began for their majesties some sixteen hours earlier.

Final event of the day in which the royal couple participated was a banquet given by the Province of Quebec with Provincial Prime Minister Maurice Duplessis as official host.

The King and Queen both wore the star emblem of the Order of the Garter. The Queen's dress was of palest pink, the bodice and puffed sleeves covered with gold sequins. A pompadour crinoline model, it was caught up at the sides in festoons trimmed with flowers. She carried a matching bag and white gloves and wore her favorite diamond tiara.

Her earrings were diamond pendants and her necklace clusters of diamonds with pear-shaped pearl drops.

Noting the Queen's gloves swinging in her hands, Quebec's government matrons promptly but surreptitiously peeled theirs but there were more white gloves on display than would be seen in all New York.

The King ate heartily and was entirely at ease, possibly due to the fact that he was not called on either to make or listen to a speech. The plump, sweet-faced Queen ate nothing.

FEDERAL AGENTS ARREST MRS. ROSE CARINA IN N. Y.

Woman Wanted in Connection With Arsenic Murder
Ring in Philadelphia

DETAILS ARE WITHHELD

By International News Service

NEW YORK, May 18—Federal agents today arrested Mrs. Rose Carina on a warrant issued as a result of disclosure of Philadelphia's fantastic mass-murder ring.

Details of the arrest were not immediately revealed, but FBI agents said they would be made public in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Carina waived extradition, and will be hurried to Philadelphia after a brief hearing in a magistrate's court, it was said. It was reported that she was sleeping when FBI men broke into her apartment.

Philadelphia detectives yesterday made a brief visit to Doylestown to see Judge Hiram H. Keller of the Bucks County Court. The visit was believed to be in connection with a writ which Joseph Schwartz, who "confessed" poisoning his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lena Winkelman, is seeking to restrain Philadelphia authorities from exhuming Mrs. Winkelman's body. A further hearing on the application for a writ is scheduled before Judge Ryan on Monday.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18—While G-men still searched for Mrs. Rose Carina, alleged Lorelei of Philadelphia's notorious insurance-murder ring, a federal warrant today was on its way to Cleveland to bring back an accused fugitive now in custody.

He is Dominick Rodeo, also known as Dominick Rodia, who was picked up at the home of a sister in the Ohio city by Cleveland detectives.

Named along with Mrs. Carina in federal fugitive warrants that brought the famed FBI agents into the case, Rodeo was wanted as an accessory to the death of Joseph Arena, a Philadelphia, allegedly drowned off the New Jersey coast in 1932 for his insurance.

U. S. Attorney Edward A. Kallick prepared the federal warrant for Rodeo, explaining it was issued to avoid delay and red tape of extradition proceedings. It is expected that Rodeo will be turned over to Philadelphia authorities immediately upon his arrival here.

Rodeo admitted to Cleveland detectives after his arrest that he was a member of the fishing party on which Arena lost his life, but insisted that the drowning was accidental. He denied also that he fled to Cleveland to escape arrest in connection with the investigation of the murder syndicate suspected of having snuffed out the lives of 100 victims.

Anthony Rozzi, 35, of Llanerch, was held in $5,000 bail for court today, on a charge of attempting to export $350 from William Mandiuk, son of Mrs. Agnes Mandiuk, one of the widows arrested in the fantastic murder for insurance conspiracy.

Canal Bill Up for Passage

Harrisburg, May 18—Legislation to permit the State Department of Forests and Waters to accept as a gift the Delaware River Canal was up for final passage today in the Senate, after being delayed another day to permit further amendment.

A companion bill permitting the Department of Forests and Waters to turn over portions of the property when acquired, to the State Highway Department was also up for final passage. Both have already been approved by the House.

Senator Howard I. James, Bucks County Republican, said the canal bill as drawn up requires the Department of Forests and Waters to take over all of the canal. This, the Senator pointed out, was not the intention of the act, and said portions of the canal have already been disposed of by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, the canal owners.

Senator James said that so far as he knew there was no opposition to the legislation, adding that he expected the bills to pass today, following which they would go to the House for concurrence in the Senate amendment.

Abandon Hope for Flier

Stockholm, Sweden, May 18—Hope was virtually abandoned today for 34-year-old Charles Backman, Swedish aviator, who attempted a solo flight from Newfoundland to Sweden in a 90-h.p. monoplane.

Since he took off early Tuesday from Botwood Airport, St. Johns, N. F., Backman was unreported along the entire 2300-mile route. Nevertheless, the Coast Guard patrols of Sweden and Norway were ordered to keep a lookout for Backman's plane on the theory he may have come down somewhere in the sub-Arctic regions of the North Sea.

Off On Mystery Flight

New York, May 18—Mystery today enveloped the flight in which Howard Hughes, the globe-girdling aviator, and two companions took off yesterday, shortly before noon from Floyd Bennett Field.

Although it was rumored at the airport that the flight was a test for a projected stratosphere flight to South America, field attaches asserted today that they had received no word from Hughes since the take-off, and did not know his destination.

Hughes took off in the same monoplane in which he flew around the world last July in 91 hours, 8 minutes and 10 seconds.

It was reported Hughes had only 250 gallons of gasoline aboard, lending to belief his course was not a lengthy one.

CHARACTER-BUILDING NEEDS ARE STRESSED

Dr. Jos. Seay, Trenton, N. J.,
Addresses Hulmeville
P. T. A.

MRS. MUCKLOW, PRES'T

HULMEVILLE, May 18—A challenging address on "The Home and School, and Development of Character" by Dr. Joseph W. Seay, of Rider College, Trenton, N. J.; election of officers for the ensuing year; and plans for Memorial Day, rounded out the May meeting of Hulmeville-Middletown Parent-Teacher Association, last evening. The session took place in the Neshaminy Methodist Church, with Samuel J. Illick presiding and introducing the speaker.

Seventy-five adults and students listened most attentively to Dr. Seay, whose talks in this borough in the past have been filled with helpful advice and encouragement in various lines of endeavor. In speaking of character-building in the present age, the speaker told that the virtues of obedience, reverence, loyalty, self-control, honesty, truthfulness, health-making, thrift, and unselfish service should be taught in the home. "The home is the place on which the character-building program must rest," he added as he stressed the imperative need for every teacher, business man and woman, and other residents "to build into the homes through the school and community the virtues of character, regardless of the parents. Do your part in aiding the girls and boys by teaching, and example."

"It is not enough that girls and boys be good, but they must be good for something. Home is the dominating influence of childhood, but the home to today is far different from that of

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

To Keep The Door Open

Washington, May 17.

SIGNS multiply that the White House politicians are contemplating another general assault on business which will justify a renewal of their spending-lending program and lay the ground for a militant political offensive designed to keep alive the third-term idea and drive the anti-New Deal Democrats to the woods. That's the idea.

CREDIT for devising this strategy is generally given Mr. Tommy Corcoran, the brilliant young gentleman who is the reputed author of most of the Presidential radio speeches and a very influential

TWO BUCKS COUNTY CASES TO BE HEARD BY PARDON BOARD

Giacomo Guiccardo To Ask for Pardon from Sentence in Bristol Murder Case

SERVING LIFE SENTENCE

Chas. Edwards Sentenced On
Robbery and Other Charges,
Also Files Appeal

Two important Bucks County cases are listed among those on which action is expected to be taken today or tomorrow by the Pennsylvania State Board of Pardons when it meets at Harrisburg.

There are 98 cases listed to come before William S. Livengood, Jr., recently inducted as Secretary of Internal Affairs and now a member of the Board.

Among the hearings will be that of Giacomo Guiccardo, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is serving a life sentence in the Eastern State Penitentiary, after being sentenced in Doylestown following a trial in the Bucks county court on a charge of murder.

Guiccardo was sentenced by Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg in 1929, when Judge Shull was conducting court at Doylestown. Guiccardo was alleged to have been the go-between in hiring killers in the "love-murder" case of Giuseppe Guida, 35-year-old Bristol Italian, who is said to have plotted with a woman to have her husband murdered. Guiccardo turned State's evidence and made it possible, in part, for Bucks county to clear up the entire case.

Giuseppe Guida, of Bristol, was electrocuted for the murder on February 3, 1930, at the Rockview Penitentiary. Mrs. Maria Tiliotta was sent to the "pen" for a life term, growing out of the same case. She was later transferred to Moyamensing for life.

In April, 1935, Guiccardo sought a release from the "pen" on a pardon but was turned down.

The other Bucks county case before the Board of Pardons will be that of Charles O. Edwards, who was sentenced in 1931 on robbery and other charges.

Edwards, whose home was in New Hope when he was arrested by State Police and County Detective Antonio Russo, was sentenced to 9 to 18 years for holding up and robbing James Hansell, 64, on August 8, 1931, in Buckingham township. Edwards was accompanied by a man by the name of Ashton, who was also sentenced.

It was preceded by the annual Spring banquet, served in the banquet hall of the church, with 24 members attending, and Miss Jean Zook, the Rev. J. C. Zook, and Thomas Keller as guests.

The table was attractive with bouquets of garden flowers, and the menu consisted of Virginia baked ham, baked beans, potato salad, cole slaw, tomato and lettuce salad, deviled eggs, preserves, rolls, butter, coffee, ice cream and home-made cake.

A social time followed the business meeting.

Caution Motorists About Speeding to Fires in Autos

Motorists who speed to fires, drive over hose lines, park near the blaze and get in the way of the firemen: Be warned!

The Keystone Automobile Club issued a denunciatory broadside yesterday for your benefit, adding a reminder that a fine of $10 is possible for failure to park at the right curb when the siren or whistle is sounded, or for following fire engines closer than 500 feet behind.

If you want to help the firemen, the club says, get out of the way and stay out.

THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1939

SURPRISE! SURPRISE!

If people's opinions swing like weather vanes in the breeze these days, there is good reason.

Political shifts in Europe and Asia during the last week or two are enough to unsettle the soundest mind. During the past years of Hitler's dominance on the continent the world became accustomed to an alignment of foreign powers which seemed stable even during the shifting of the European map and the mad race for power abroad.

Great Britain, France, the smaller Balkan countries seemed solidly lined up against Germany, Italy and Japan. Russia was always counted in on the side of the democracies.
Hitler hated Moscow. Poland leaned toward Germany, hating Russia
with fanatical zeal.

With bewildering suddenness the international picture has shifted during the past week or two. Japan is reported showing a decided preference for the democracies. Germany is reported holding out the olive branch to Russia. The Poles are leaning away from the threat of Hitler, seeking better relations with Stalin. What the effect of the definite military alliance between Italy and Germany will be on the smaller
Balkan countries is a moot question.
We are watching a kaleidoscope which changes its pattern with every slight jerk of the international machine.

Before the year is out we may come to accept without undue surprise an alliance between Great Britain and Germany? Japan and Russia in the same camp, Italy and France progressing hand in hand.
Political expediency makes strange bed-fellows.

The naivete of the American citizen in these matters is almost pitiful.
How have opinions or maintain them when the foundations on which they are based shift like quicksand?
But the time will come when even the trusting heart of America will become used to the kaleidoscope.
The changing pictures will bring nothing more than a sigh of resignation. We can't go on being surprised indefinitely, and the saturation point is near.

OLYMPIUS FOR WOMEN

We have been in the habit of thinking that the women of America are the freest on earth, farthest in the front in their battle for equal rights with men. The notion goes by the board as we read a dispatch from Geneva, Switzerland, which reports that Scandinavian women have achieved the greatest advancement in the fight for equal rights with men
in industry.

The survey, which shows that the status of working women in various parts of the world ranges all the way from complete subservience to full equality, shows that in certain parts of the Orient woman is a slave,
while in the Scandinavian countries women in industry are on a par with men and in advance of their sisters elsewhere, and that includes even the United States.

Speaking of hard work for small wages, did you ever see a dozen relatives going after a $1500 estate?

Adjectives and adverbs seldom
make a statement more convincing.
Take, for instance, that sign:
"Money cheerfully refunded."

Anticipating a World's Fair crush, the New York hotelkeeper is intent on making his hostelry the busiest that jacks filled.

British Rulers Leave Quebec On Canadian Tour

By way of keeping her hands busy
the Queen carefully and mechanically rearranged her silver, place card and napkin which the two personal footrearranged after the Chateau Fronte-

after they had been originally arranged by a tall-coated but unsuperior waiter. The score was zero at half-

Among those at the head table were

"AIR MAIL BRIDE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Marie Therese Alexander lives
in Hollywood, at 657 Dover Drive.
That Hollywood address may sound exciting but it isn't really.
Dover Drive is a dusty, hot little street, far from the wide boulevards. There is a sign in the window, "Julie's Beauty Shoppe." Underneath it is another sign,
"Circulating Library." Julie Standifer, of the old silent film days—is Marie's mother. They live with Julie's third husband, Charlie Bronson. Marie hasn't the temperament for the movies. She takes out her longing for romance by corresponding with Edward Wilson of Oakland, whose letter to a correspondence club she answered.

CHAPTER II

Sometimes she thought of making a real try to get into pictures, for the idea held glamor for her. She could never understand Julie's attitude.

What if you did have to starve yourself, and study elocution and work crazy hours, and never know what was next? It would be EX-CITING!

But in her heart she knew that it would never be, for if her mother, who had been born to it, and was never afraid of anyone, had found the pace too fast for her, what chance had a girl like she?

The screen executives and casting directors to whom Julie had sent her so confidently three years ago, had never really seen her. They were out of town, or out on location, or in conference. Sometimes she wondered, and was instantly ashamed of her own disloyalty, if they really remembered who Julie Standifer was? The fact that Julie had changed from Julie to Julia, to Juliet and back again, and, even for a brief period, had used her first husband's name, Alexander, didn't make it easier to recall her.

And without an appointment,
Marie could never get past the crowds in the waiting room. She didn't have the nerve, and she knew it.

If she had been arrestingly beautiful, or even an oddly unusual type...

Her mother's friends had advised her to "go Russian." Directors were crazy about Russians. Marie's father, big, handsome ne'er-do-well
Steve Alexander, hadn't been Russian really, though they always spoke of him that way. He had been a Serb.

Marie had inherited his light, green-gold eyes, his ivory skin, his high cheek bones, and remarkably even, small white teeth, but her hair was dark like Julie's, and except for a certain wide-eyed sweetness, and a general air of romance, she wasn't remarkable in a Hollywood where every soda girl, every department store clerk, every beauty shop operator, is a beauty.

And so Marie found her hope, her dream, her future, in the letters from a "pen pal" from Northern California. She loved him. He loved her. They'd marry some day.

Some day of course she'd have to meet him.

Some day he'd know that she wasn't just the Marie Therese of her carefully written letters. Some day he'd know that Dover street was—well, Dover street. And that "my mother who used to be in pictures" is now Julie, of Julie's Beauty Shoppe.

But by that time he'd love her so much, the tie would be so strong, and I've got to be there!"

that it wouldn't matter. They'd laugh over it, and they'd love each other all the more for it, and grow old together....

"Do you remember... wasn't it funny?... Writing all those years?
... Of course I never thought that you really thought..."

It would be wonderful meeting
Edward some day.

Some day... maybe next fall, or next spring.

She would have been sick with apprehension and terror had she known that he was already in town.
At that moment thumbing through

"All right, you'll be there. Charlie will drive you. Now, for heaven's sake, go and get DRY!"

Charlie Bronson drove the car into the garage in the rear of the lot, lumbered up the backstairs with his purchases, which he deposited with an asthmatic whistle, on the kitchen table.

"There's your stuff," he said,
counting over the paper bags with a stubby finger. "Oranges, cauliflower, avocados, lemon pie 'n'
pork chops."

"Wait," Julie said. "Where are you going?"

At that moment Edward was thumbing through the telephone book for her number.

the telephone book for her number.

Marie Alexander's usually neat little room was a mess. Bureau drawers were open, tissue paper on the floor, dresses, hats and odds and ends of ribbons, collars, artificial flowers and silk hose draped the bed.

Marie herself was distraught and tearful. Her small, dark head bristled with tin curlers. Her face glittered with cold cream. With shaking fingers she felt the wet, close waves of her hair above the row of curlers.

"It'll never dry!" she said despondently.

"Not unless you stick it under a drier and stay there for 15 minutes!" her mother returned briskly.

"But I haven't time! How can I take 15 minutes now? When I can't find anything to wear—and I have to be at the Biltmore at 5! I'll never make it. I can't do it—and I can't go with my hair all wet!"

Julie picked up a faded blue cotton kimono, and held it out. "Now go right downstairs and get under that drier and stay there till I tell you to come out. You have PLENTY of time. Besides, it's a good idea to keep him waiting. They like it."

"No! I can't be late. I promised,
such, the tie would be so strong, and I've got to be there!"

"Nowhere. Just going to read the paper, and smoke my pipe. Why?
Did I forget something?"

Julie eyed his middle-aged hulk with diffidence. He was always so good-natured, and she hated to ask him to do things for Marie. Marie was her child, and her problem.

"Honey, I hate to ask you... but you've got to drive Marie over to the Biltmore. She's got this date and she's all to pieces over it, so I told her I'd—"

"You told her you'd tell Charlie to driver her over, eh?"

"Well—what else could I do?
Honestly, she's just about crazy.
She's in there drying her hair now
though it was only washed Saturday, and I told her it didn't need it.
My Lord, you'd think she was getting ready for a screen test. If De Mille was going to put on 'Romeo and Juliet' with her in the lead she couldn't be more—"

"O. K.," Charlie said. His broad, flat face was creased with silent laughter. He jerked with a thumb in the direction of the "beauty shoppe." "But what's the cause of all the excitement? The 'Pen Pal' arrive in town?"

"Oh, CHARLIE! How did you guess it! You always guess everything!"

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

BROILED STEAK ALWAYS "TOPS" AS TO FLAVOR

At All Seasons Ranks High In The Popularity Parade

EASY ACCOMPLISHMENT

Always "tops" in favor with connoisseurs of good food, especially with men, is broiled steak. At all seasons and in all places it ranks high in the popularity parade.

Realizing that, the clever home-maker adds the art of broiling a steak to perfection to her list of accomplishments very early in her career. In fact, it really should be among the "must" courses in any school for brides.

Not the least part of the appeal of a perfectly broiled steak is that it is an easy main dish about which to plan a dinner menu. It seems to give something of its own fine flavor to the foods served with it. A simple menu, for example, French fried potatoes, green beans and a combination salad of fresh vegetables, turns into a real feast when these foods accompany a sizzling hot, brown, tender steak.

Although broiling a steak is one of the tests of a cook's ability, fortunately it isn't hard and no one need fail. Here is the right way to do it, according to Inez S. Willson, home economist.

Broiled Steak
Have sirloin, club, or porterhouse steak cut at least 1 inch thick. Thoroughly preheat broiler oven. Place the steak on the broiler rack at a sufficient distance from the source of the heat so that by the time it is browned on one side, it will be cooked half way through. Usually this is three inches, with the regulator turned high.

When one side of the steak is browned, season it with salt and pepper, turn and brown the other side. Then the steak is ready to serve at once.

SOME DISHES SO OLD THEY'RE NEW

Remember when Grandmother sat up half the night to knead and knead the dough for her delectable breakfast rolls? Or Aunt Millicent prowled like a thief in the night, removing her famous wine jelly from the kitchen window sill, where it had stubbornly refused to "set," to the cooler environs of the cellar, where, at long last, it did?

Those were the leisurely days of long hours spent in the kitchen in order that more and pleasanter hours might be spent over the family dinner table. America was well on the way to developing a culinary art all its own then, curves were worn with pride instead of shame, and calories were among the undiscovered secrets of the world of science.

Those days have gone, but hints of them may be found here and there—even in so scholarly a setting as the Guidebook series compiled by the Federal Writers' Projects. For in a nation-wide delving into local customs and habits and tastes, many a native dish was discovered and many a treasured recipe came to light, some of which have found their way into the Guides, where they should give valuable hints to the harassed housewife and hostess in search of variations in her menu. Some of these dishes are sufficiently old fashioned to be new again, and some, as products of their particular sections of the country, may well prove a novelty to metropolitan dwellers.

The humble potato, for example, has played many important roles from a soup ingredient to a dessert, but south of the Mason-Dixon line, that prolific member of the family, the sweet potato or yam, combines the office of vegetable and sweet in the following delightful manner:

Sweet Potatoes Southern Style
Peel six large sweet potatoes or yams and boil until soft. Mash and beat with egg, cream and brown sugar and cinnamon to taste. Place in a buttered casserole and cover with halved marshmallows. Bake in moderate oven until delicately brown.

The South, as the compilers of the Guide series discovered, is the natural habitat of recipes for ham in all its various combinations and methods of cooking. Here is a recipe that pleasantly disposes of the meat-and-vegetable Sunday supper problem.

Maryland Stuffed Ham
Parboil ham, cut it in even slices about 1/4-inch thick, and make alternate layers of ham and chopped whole spring onions and spinach or other green vegetable. Sew into a piece of clean white cheesecloth and boil slowly for half or three quarters of an hour. Remove from the water, allow to cool, and cut crosswise in thin slices. The result is an artistic color combination of pink and green—and quite as delicious as it looks. In Maryland this is a great favorite at Easter Time.

Fiery Itching Skin Gets Quick Relief

Home Treatment Eases Unbearable Soreness—Distress
There is one simple yet inexpensive way to ease the itching and torture of Eczema, Itching Tinea, or Foot Rash, and many other externally caused skin eruptions and that is to apply Moone's Eczema Oil night and morning and people who suffer from such embarrassing or unsightly skin troubles would be wise to try it.
Just ask any first-class druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Eczema Oil and refuse to accept anything else. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that a small bottle lasts a long time and furthermore, if this clean, powerful, penetrating oil that helps promote healing fails to give you full and complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

BROILED STEAK—FAVORITE WITH MEN

low to cool, and cut crosswise in thin slices. The result is an artistic color combination of pink and green—and quite as delicious as it looks. In Maryland this is a great favorite at Easter Time.

Also from the South comes the popular Brunswick Stew, named for Brunswick County, Virginia, where it originated. Old recipes for this usually began, "First catch your hare," and bagging a wild squirrel successfully a layer of chopped or

Brunswick Stew

Clean and dry meat, cut in small portions and dip in flour. Place a large kettle (preferably an iron one, the masters of the art say) over a slow fire. Into this drop first a layer of coarsely chopped salt pork, then thinly sliced onions, one of parboiled potatoes sliced fairly thin, one of fresh or canned corn, one of lima beans, and finally another layer of meat. Repeat the process until all the ingredients have been placed in the kettle, then pour two quarts of boiling water over the whole, cover it and allow it to simmer for three or four hours. At the end of that time, and one quart of tomatoes (if they are fresh ones, of course, you'll cut them into pieces convenient for eating), two tablespoons of sugar, one of salt and as much pepper as the family likes. Cover again and continue to cook for an hour or more, then thicken with half a cup of flour and half a cup of butter rubbed together into a smooth paste, and more salt and pepper if you find it necessary. One chicken and the accompanying salt pork and vegetables will make a large potful of Brunswick Stew. Fortunately, for everyone is very apt to want a second or even a third helping. The dish is quite as good as new when warmed over.

No guide to southern travel would be complete without reference to that famous delight of the epicure, fried chicken. Here is the way it should be prepared according to the best plantation tradition:

Southern Fried Chicken

Wash, cut in convenient pieces and pat dry, one young chicken or broiler. Sprinkle the meat with salt and a little pepper, and roll in flour until well coated. Place cubes of salt pork in a saucepan and fry over a slow fire, not allowing the pork to brown or burn but extracting the grease. Remove the pork and place the chicken in the hot fat, cooking briskly until both sides are delicately brown. Then lower your flame and allow the chicken to simmer slowly. At the end of that time, transfer it to a hot platter, and again sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour rich milk or cream into the saucepan, letting it come to a boil and then thickening it with a tablespoonful of butter and a tablespoonful of flour rubbed into a paste. Season the gravy to taste and pour it over the chicken—and be mindful of your curves and calories if you can when you taste the result!

It wasn't only in the South that colonial ingenuity evolved tasty dishes from the ingredients at hand. Buckwheat cakes, all kinds of fruit pies and puddings and ingenious concoctions of "Indian meal" (corn meal) caused the tables of our Pilgrim Fathers to groan—as well, perhaps, as the less abstemious of our Pilgrim Fathers themselves. Here is a dessert that may be served either hot or cold and that has long been a favorite in the New England states. It might prove something of a sensation at the average city-dweller's table.

Baked Indian Pudding

Scald three and a half cups of milk in a double boiler. While the milk is heating, stir half a cup of corn meal and a half a cup of cold milk together until all lumps are eliminated. Add this to the scalding milk and stir until the mixture thickens, then lift the inner part of the boiler from the water, place it over the flame and, stirring carefully to avoid scorching, let your embryonic pudding just come to a boil. Into a deep, well buttered baking dish, pour two cups of cold milk and half a cup of molasses. Stir yeigle year," said Dr. Seay as he decried the fact that so many parents neglect character-building influence and training. The great part the school has to play in this work, due to the long periods the pupils are in classes was mentioned, present-day parents placing dependence to a great extent on the school and parent-teacher organizations for this work. "There are so many problems that must be solved by outsiders in this day and age that sometimes I wonder if we have homes," continued the Trentonian. He continued by telling of the appalling crime list in the United States with the majority of sentences six years ago being for the age group of 22-23, and now the age-group highest in number being 17 and 18 years. "There are great problems in regards to character-building for the children today, because of the different standards set up by the parents. Parents should have high standards and adhere to them. The home and school, the parents and teachers must work together for the development of character. Problems which face the young people today are so numerous; they come faster than they can find solutions. We should so inculcate in the young character-building influences that the youth can make right decisions when problems arise. So many of the youth have not strength of character because the foundations are not strongly laid in the home—in fact in some cases they are never laid.

"Life is made up of love, work, culture, religion. If we have these firmly imbedded in the young, we will have stronger men and women tomorrow." The manner in which organizations such as the P. T. A.'s, and others, and the schools are aiding youth today was praised by the speaker.

Two selections by a students' chorus were given with Miss Margaret Perry as pianist. The numbers were "Voices of the Woods" and "A Dream Boat Passes By." The invocation was made by the Rev. Louis Fifer, 3rd, vicar of Grace Episcopal Church. During election of officers Mrs.

Joseph Mucklow was named president; Mrs. Albert Wunsch, vice-president; Mrs. William Wheeler, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter Jackson, corresponding secretary; S. Brehaut, treasurer. Committee named to arrange for the Memorial Day refreshments for the children includes: Mrs. William Hill, Mrs. Saenz, Mrs. William Wheeler.

The Great Game of Politics

lines and the occasion selected is the annual meeting of the American Retail Federation in Washington next Monday.

ARRANGEMENTS for this speech were made by Mr. Corcoran personally and a cleverly thought out campaign to make it successful is being conducted. Mainly, this consists in attacks upon big business as represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce, whose convention three weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt pointedly declined to address. As usual, the chamber's resolutions, though sound enough in the main, gave an opening for the New Deal sharpshooters and there has since been a rather concerted barrage.

MR. HOPKINS, returning to his job after ten weeks of sick-leave absence and apparently having lost his eager desire to co-operate with business, criticized the resolutions as "dull." Senator Minton, of Indiana, a New Deal yes-man, in a breast-beating speech, assailed the chamber and harped on the old string that big business is on a sit-down strike against the Administration. Various other political and journalistic spokesmen followed up the idea, all accentuating the fact that the President had deliberately chosen to make "his next important economic utterance" to the little businessmen rather than the big ones, the theory being that the former are more "liberal" and New Dealish than the latter.

THERE is some room for doubt about that. In fact, at their meeting a year ago the little businessmen seemed more anti-New Dealish than some of the big ones. Nevertheless, Mr. Corcoran, in his astute and engaging way, has done all possible to insure the President a sympathetic audience which will pass no mean resolutions. A great deal of work has been done in preparing for the meeting and in preparing the speech. Those who usually have accurate information of "inner circle" ideas confidently predict that in the latter the President will do three things.

—O—

1. HE will assail again the reactionary ideas of big business as exemplified by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and end all idea that he intends to "appease" the budget balancers and economy-minded.

2. He will make again his appeal to all "liberals" to stand together in support of the New Deal principles and urge the dissenters to get out of the party.

3. He will leave the door open as to whether he will be a third-term candidate.

All three of these points are basic in the current White House political strategy—particularly the third. The palace politicians of the Corcoran school are intensely concerned that that door be kept open. For one thing, they realize that once it is accepted that the President will not run again, the last vestige of his party control would vanish and the jobholders who always cling to the hope that somehow the current regime will continue, would start trying to locate a gold bet for 1940.

SMALL LINE OF GROCERIES

FOR another thing, they cannot themselves give up the notion that the people are still with Mr. Roosevelt to such a degree that he might not only force a reluctant party to accept him again, but successfully smash the oldest and most deeply cherished American political tradition. Clinging to this thought, the word has gone out through various channels that the President will be "compelled" to run again. It is being echoed all up and down the line — by a Broadway gossip columnist on the radio, by various magazine and newspaper writers who "lie in" with the Corcoran group, by New Deal Senators and jobholders. But, it may be noticed, not by Mr. Farley, whose political views do not coincide with those of Mr. Corcoran—and who does not work in harmony with him. However, the President plays up and is fully expected next Monday to perform according to schedule.

Soroptimists Hear of The Literary Colony of Bucks

The Soroptimist Club of Bucks County learned much of "Bucks County Writers" at their dinner meeting in Doylestown, this week, when Miss Grace Chandler told that 150 writers of every classification compose the literary colony of the county.

"They include, of course, novelists, short story writers, poets, mystery story, children's and moving picture scenario writers, humorists, columnists, playwrights, biographers and historians."

"The darlings of the columnists," Miss Chandler said, "are Pearl S. Buck, Dorothy Parker, George S. and Beatrice Kaufman, Moss Hart, Bella and Sam Spewack and S. J. Perelman."

Paying a tribute to Mrs. Josephine Herbst, who lives near Erwinna, and has written such novels as "Nothing Is Sacred," "Pity Is Not Enough" and "Rope of Gold," Miss Chandler asserted she is "almost the forgotten woman of Bucks county although she has lived here longer than many others. Her books are serious social studies and are not popular with those who only read to be entertained."

Dorothy Parker was described as "three-in-one" because she is a wit, poet and short story writer. "Mrs. Parker's real fame lies in her short stories. 'One of the drawbacks, I think, is that she makes her readers do some of the work,'" said the speaker.

She mentioned the versatility of George S. Kaufman, who is "one of the greatest directors in the American theatre, as a playwright, director and collaborator with Moss Hart."

Dr. Elizabeth Keitsch-Farquhar, the president, was in charge of the meeting which was attended by 20 women members. There were four guests, including Mrs. Frank D. Good, Mrs. Anna Horn McEvoy, Miss E. Helaine Littleman and Miss Adelaide Dietrich.

President Farquhar announced that Soroptimist Club will be held at the New York World's Fair, and that Elizabeth Hawes, of England, will serve as the international representative.

Soroptimists of the New York City and Bronx clubs will be the hostesses every Saturday from five to seven

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL

Permission of the Mexican government was necessarily secured for photographing backgrounds in the Republic film, "Forged Passport," now showing at the Bristol Theatre.

One of the greatest and most unusual pictures of this or any other year is "The Adventures of Chico," the Woodard production which is now playing at the Bristol Theatre. Here is a thoroughly different type of screen entertainment, and it's entertainment of the highest calibre. . . . simple, tender, charming, and thrilling. There is nothing lacking that any one might suggest that would make "Chico" a more enjoyable film. . . . It has been acclaimed by critics all over the country, and we can only add our share of praise to the ever-growing plaudits.

RITZ

Replete with thrills and a happy mixture of catchy tunes, Gene Autry's newest musical western from Republic Studios, "Mexicali Rose," previewed last night at the Ritz Theatre, is excellent screen fare, and a new feather in the popular cowboy's hat.

A choice cast helps Gene in "Mexicali Rose." Two famed veterans, Noah Beery and William Farnum, head the supporting players. Luana Walters, a lovely newcomer, does well as the feminine interest.

The screen's sharp turn from the "screwball" and "slapstick" themes, so popular last season, to a good-natured satire directed at persons and customs in the news is evidenced in Paramount's "Cafe Society," the comedy of life in New York's much-publicized "aristocracy of the night clubs." With Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray and Shirley Ross in starring roles, the picture opened last night at the Ritz theatre.

GRAND

Don Ameche brings another immortal character to the motion picture gallery of the great in the title role of Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," which is currently at the Grand Theatre.

Ideally cast as the young genius who invented the telephone, inspired by the unflinching devotion of a beautiful young girl, the popular actor offers his greatest portrayal in this stirring romantic drama which symbolizes the tradition of America.

MASTERTON PITCHES SENATORS TO VICTORY

Rookie Walter Masterton, '8-year-old right-hander with two innings of previous professional baseball experience, snapped the Washington Senators' losing streak at three games yesterday by holding the Detroit Tigers to six hits, all singles, for a 4 to 1 victory.

Masterton, last year, played with the Landreth nine here and won eight of the nine games that he pitched. He created a sensation here and soon attracted big league attention.

Great things are predicted for the former Landreth twirler and those who know their baseball say he is the rookie who will go places in the big leagues this year.

MT. HOLLY WILL OPPOSE LANDRETH, HERE, SAT.

Landreth nine will play Mt. Holly here Saturday at three o'clock at Landreth ball park. Last season Mt. Holly

The Hall Aluminum nine went into a tailspin in the fourth inning of its tilt with the Diamond team last evening and before it could straighten out, the Diamond team pushed over seven runs to win the contest, 10-3.

Harrison, the starting hurler, and Stromp, the reliever, were both shelled in the fourth inning uprising of the Diamond team, although an error helped Harrison to go down. Alrich socked a home run during the melee with Purcell on base.

EDGELY ROD & GUN CLUB ENJOYS PICTURES, TALK

The Edgely Rod and Gun Club held a very interesting meeting on Monday evening. Cyrus Smith, of Hulmeville, was the guest speaker and gave an extremely interesting illustrated talk on big game hunting in the Canadian Rockies.

Mr. Smith's pictures, in color, are outstanding for an amateur. The film taken along the Dawson trail which was followed by one showing the miners going to the Klondike in 1898 drew special comment from the members present. The trout fishing in Raup Lake made the followers of Isaac Walton yearn to indulge in their favorite sport.

During the business meeting the committee concerned with the club's incorporation reported that the Court had passed on the incorporation proceedings and the club is now a non-profit corporation.

The secretary reported that the membership card had been received from the Delaware Valley Protective Association.

After the adjournment refreshments were served.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR JUNIOR FISHING CONTEST

YARDLEY, May 18—Extensive plans have been made for the junior fishing contest to be staged by the Yardley Fish and Game Association for the children, aged 10 to 16 years, in the Delaware canal, just North of Alton avenue bridge, from two to four on Sunday.

The canal is being stocked for the event, and a number of valuable prizes will be awarded to the one catching the most fish during the time limit, the one catching the largest fish, etc., and to the one not catching any will go the consolation prize.

LANGHORNE

About 250 persons partook of the baked ham supper served by the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. David Post has gone to New York state where she will spend some time with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest M. Moyer spent the week-end in East Waterford.

Jean Reeder spent the week-end in Philadelphia visiting her cousin, Nancy Pickard.
Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Shriver have returned from a visit to relatives in Waverly, N. Y.
